Kick-start your planning process by learning the Secrets of Great Planning from the 'Big End of Town'

"The budget process at most companies has to be the most ineffective process in management. It sucks energy, time, fun and big dreams out of an organisation. It hides opportunity and stunts growth. It brings out the most unproductive behaviours in an organisation from sandbagging to settling for mediocrity." Jack Welsh (GE).

Your annual planning and budgeting process doesn't need to be like this. It should be the lifeblood of your business. It is an invaluable opportunity to reflect on the year that has been and use this to map out a better way forward.

The business reviews conducted by independent consultant (Australian Federal Government) indicate that SMEs struggle in the area of budgeting and planning.

By attending this event you will get an opportunity to:

- Identify the strengths and weaknesses of your business planning process
- Become skilled at best-practice planning techniques
- Learn the secrets of great planning, used by the big end of town.

Sarah Godfrey

Having led the Rio Tinto Iron Ore Business Improvement department for the Western Australian operations, Sarah Godfrey has an excellent working knowledge of organisational change, business strategy development & execution, Lean cultural change and Six Sigma process improvement.

With a strong operational background, she also understands the challenges involved in making these changes stick as a business leader. Sarah is a qualified Mechanical Engineer and holds a Bachelors degree in Commerce.
